JUNIOR WEEK TO BE ONE OF LITTLE SLEEP

Many and Varied Activities to Fill
Happy Hours.

UNDERCLASS "SCRAP"

While Others Make Merry at
Sports and Teas—Prom
Hours 2-5.

There is just one important event which the Prom committee has overlooked in making out its schedule, the time which nature demands that men shall sleep. Maybe that isn't of the least importance on such occasions, however.

A hasty glance at the present schedule indicates at once that there will be any quantity of dreamy-eyed "Debs" frequenting the houses on the evening of Saturday, May 17. Festivities begin on Friday. "They" will arrive in all their splendor on Friday afternoon and doubtless will witness the baseball game with Rutgers.

At night comes the big event of the year. The committee has been working for some weeks now and everything is pretty well organized. Mrs. James W. Yelverton, Mrs. Willis T. Hanson, Jr., Mrs. Edward Ellery, Mrs. Charles F. F. Garis, Mrs. Augustine J. McGee, and Mrs. J. R. Lovejoy have consented to act as patronesses. The programs, of a novel type, have been ordered and everything promises to be a big success. The hour for the grand promenade has been set at ten o'clock and the signal for dismissal will be blown at five A. M.

The only reason for this early breaking up of festivities is so that if a dawn tea is held the sun will not be too high to make the name inappropriate. While the others are lingering over the aromatic tea leaves, the underclassmen will tear off the starched bib and tucker in preparation for the idol fight which ends at seven.

The "scraps" promise to be some contrast to the ping pong game staged last year. The Sophomores are considerably outnumbered but they claim to thrive on battles while the "Frosh" aren't saying much but appear to be awfully willing.

After the dying and the dead and disposed of and breakfast hath been partaken, the regular Moving-Up Day exercises will take place in the Chapel whence everyone will journey forth to see the Idol receive its coat of purity at the hands of the entente, and also to look upon the Seniors who will have donned cap and gown for the first time.

A tennis match has been promised for the remainder of the morning but no opponent has yet been announced. The afternoon, however, has its full quota of happenings. An interclass track meet at 2 o'clock and a baseball game with N. Y. U. at 3:30 promise to

CONCORDY HEADS ELECTED TO PHI BETA KAPPA

Brenton T. Taylor

Henry E. Rosenberg

Henry E. Rosenberg and Brenton T. Taylor of the class of 1919 were elected to the Phi Beta Kappa Society at a meeting of the Union Chapter last Saturday. The candidates will be initiated on April 12.

Rosenberg and Taylor are both graduates of the Glens Falls High School, the former being a resident of that town while the latter hails from Hartford, N. Y. Rosenberg is president of the Classical Club, managing editor of THE CONCORDIENSIS and a member of the Adelpic Debating Society.

Taylor is editor-in-chief of THE CONCORDIENSIS, former editor of the 1919 Gannet, and a member of the Delta Phi Fraternity, the Phi Alpha Society, and the Idol Club.

SHOULD UNION ENTER EASTERN LEAGUE?

Question to Be Discussed at Next Board Meeting.

At the next meeting of the Athletic Board on April 9th, Coach "Bill" Northrop, '18, will urge that Union enter the newly formed Eastern Intercollegiate Athletic Association. The movement is already represented in eleven colleges throughout the east and has adopted its constitution and planned for the first annual track and field meet on May 9 and 10 at Pratt field in Springfield, Mass.

E. Faber, director of athletics at Rochester University, was elected treasurer of the association at a meeting in Springfield on March 22. Some changes were voted in the usual field events. The point system was altered to make the count five, three, two and one for the first, second, third and fourth places respectively.

The colleges represented were Massachusetts Agricultural, Colgate, Springfield, Holy Cross, New Hampshire Worcester, Technology, Stevens, New York University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Tufts and Rochester.

PRINCETON TRIP ALTERED BY RECESS

Owing to the fact that Princeton University is now having its spring recess, Lloyd Parker, '19, and J. L. D. Speer, '20, the representatives chosen by the Honor Court to go to study the operation of the Honor System in that college, have postponed their visit.

GOOD NEWS RECEIVED FROM FORMER ATHLETES

Jack Collins and Joe Jones on Road to Recovery.

Good news came to Union last week to the effect that two former stars in the realm of athletics, Jack Collins and Joe Jones both of the class of 1920 are on the road to recovery.

Collins, a shining light on last year's basketball court and one of the best shortstops that Union ever had, was taken ill with Bright's disease about a year ago. He has had several relapses and has been more or less in a serious condition ever since. Reports received last week, however, state that he has been put on a new and very effective diet. He is getting much lighter and a great deal of hope is expressed for his immediate recovery.

Jones suffered an attack of pneumonia shortly after the re-opening of college in January. Complications of the disease caused the temporary paralysis of his legs and for several weeks he was in a critical condition. He is now able to be about though it may be some time before he begins to drop 'em through the basket again. He was captain of this season's basketball team, and was looked upon as an inevitable point-getter in the coming track season.

SWEATER COMMITTEE

SELECTED BY FROSH

The Freshman class has appointed B. M. Clark and P. Davis as the committee to dispose of class sweaters.

STORM PUTS LID ON OUTDOOR PRACTICE

But Work Continues in the Gym.
Tryouts Encouraging.

OUTLOOK BRIGHT

Captain and Coach Very Optimistic Concerning Baseball Prospects This Spring.

Unfortunately, gentle nature chose to put some finishing touches on a rather poorly conducted winter program and covered the grass and flowers with a blanket of snow which has necessarily put the lid on outdoor baseball and track practice for a few days. There is no reciprocal change in the schedule, however, for this delay.

The season will begin auspiciously, so 'tis said, on the morning of April 19 with a game at N. Y. U. and another in the afternoon with the Crescent A. C. at Brooklyn. But according to Captain "Hal" Wittner prospects of a winning team are brighter than they have been in some years.

Coach "Matty" Fitzgerald has been busy for the last ten days putting the men through some preliminary work and is expected to begin picking his team very soon. The results so far are very encouraging, and despite the snowy weather Friday, some valuable practice was held in the gymnasium. There has been no falling off in the number of candidates who report for practice and the try-outs show a wealth of good material.

Holleran, '20, Butler, '22, Clark, '22, and Gilbert, '22, continue to look like promising candidates for the mound and with the others look like a strong string for Union. Captain Wittner will take his usual place behind the bat and if he shoots 'em over to second per usual there remains little doubt that the backstop will be well looked after.

With such a line-up of pitchers as are mentioned above and Wittner for catcher it would appear that Union has to begin with, a battery which compares favorably with any of the teams she is scheduled to play. Butler is considered a good find. He has been conspicuous in baseball for several years and distinguished himself as twirler for the Waterford high school when his team was a member of the Syracuse league.

Lewis and Bartley at shortstop have the earmarks of a good pair of infielders, while Hanley and Mallery will doubtless hold down their old jobs at first and third respectively. Every position on the team, save Wittner's has some strong rivalry for it and this fact alone is bound to raise the general efficiency of the squad several degrees.

Judgment.

"Judgment is the master-workman in a play," said Dryden, as indeed it is well the master-workman of every piece of work. Judgment might well be termed the differentiating element in literature and art between the master and the novice. The latter sees only with his own eyes while the former possesses that divine gift to see with the eyes of others.

When one is towering on some pinnacle of eloquence, a comparatively slight blow may topple him over into some abyss of ridicule and derision. It is the unschooled orator who flits from "the rock-bound coasts of Maine to the sunny slopes of California" and calls to witness the blood of a thousand wars. Inspiration is truly an essential to any work but it must be subordinated to judgment. The other extreme is no less frequently indulged in with regard to orations.

The subordination of emotion to judgment, however, does not imply in any degree that it should be obliterated. An oration, being the most formal kind of discourse, usually takes the form of a supplication, petition or eulogy and can not achieve its end without feeling. The speaker must have emotion if his listeners are to imbibe it. In life however, some great issue inspires the orator. But at Union College, where students are called upon to write three orations a year, inspiration is often lacking, yet the orations must go on. Hence here and there an inappropriate subject. One student a short time ago chose "Cheese-Making" as the topic with which to hypnotize his audience. Needless to say the appeal was singular if not endowed with eulogistic thought.

Another instance was sighted at the time of a certain painter who represented very exactly the inner view of a side of beef. No doubt his task required fully as much technique as was demanded to paint the Madonna, but as pieces of art they are as far apart as the "Gettysburg Address" and "Cheese-Making." Such breaches of judgment as this last at once deprive the artist of showing any spark of ability that might be lurking in his pen or paintbrush because their inappropriateness becomes ludicrous to everybody. Conceive of an artist evidencing his immortal genius by the depiction of the intricacies of some twenty-five or thirty feet of alimentary canal, or an impassioned orator rising to ethereal heights of eloquence while declaiming the sturdy, but wholly unaesthetic art of cheese-making. How could Webster's pen inspire emotions of pathos or hatred if turned to such a subject?

But oratory and painting are perhaps the least afflicted of any of the arts because they are the least attempted. The short story has of late years had its maladies but the consummation of all human misjudgments finds expression in poetry. They who walk where angels fear to tread find poetry the vehicle of expression for such outbursts of the soul which in prose would be either non-understandable or utterly disgusting. Such an expression as:

"Vernal spring, thy balmy breezes,
They can waft away diseases."
were better left unsaid, as something too lovely to find form in words. Yet every person has no doubt, at times, written poetry, few have ever published their verses, however, and considerably less achieved fame from them.

Thus does the lack of judgment annihilate prophetic thought. Doubtless the authors of some of these hybrid expressions half heavenly, half hellish, ten years hence would see their errors as plainly as others see them now. Knowledge can teach grammar and usage of words but genius alone knows when to restrain emotional expressions and when to give them free rein, for these are matters of judgment.

Are You a Cynic?

Modern college men have developed the quality of insincerity in everyday thought and action to a high degree of perfection—or, better, imperfection. In the bigger, more vital questions which confront them, they are, perhaps, truly themselves but when it comes to unimportant daily conduct and expression, they are highly artificial.

The result of such artificiality and insincerity is a kind of cynicism—moderated and weakened, but nevertheless cynicism; and the appellation of cynic is not a pleasant one. The dictionary calls a cynic "one who disbelieves in and sneers at disinterestedness and moral worth"—a definition which does not seem to apply closely to the undergraduate state of mind, perhaps, but which is similar in essential elements to the general attitude. College men almost invariably pretend to be skeptics; they show little faith in the aims and efforts of their fellows, if those aims and efforts are outside a certain small sphere of "approved" activities; they outwardly place no trust in more serious endeavor, where they are not concerned. In short they are artificial and superficial in their criticisms, and hence generally cynical in their attitude.

Such an attitude is not an inherent part of undergraduate nature; it is the outgrowth of a natural reserve, usually unconsciously assumed. A large class of college men choose to suppress their natural feelings and emotions, cloaking them under a show of sophistication and worldly wisdom which, in most cases, is entirely unreal.

They think it more or less of a disgrace to allow their true thoughts and opinions to seep through to the surface; in their eyes, to criticize destructively is to display wisdom and insight whereas to appreciate is a mere sign of weak will or poor judgment. Just the opposite is more likely to be true; but as long as college men refuse to let their real emotions show themselves, and as long as they insist on exhibiting a false set of sentiments and ideas to their fellows, such opinions will dominate and false cynicism will remain.—The Dartmouth.

YALE PLANS MEMORIAL FOR ATHLETES WHO DIED IN WAR

Although no definite plans have been made, Yale has decided to establish a particular memorial to her athletes who fell during the recent war. This, according to present plans, will be entirely separate from the general war memorial which will be erected later in token of all the war activities of the alumni and undergraduates. Three captains of former major sport teams have been killed in the war. They are Alec Wilson, Johnnie Overton, and Albert Sturtevant, representing football, track, and crew, respectively. One of the plans now proposed would assure the erection of a definite general memorial to these athletes. Other plans call for a separate memorial to each of the three captains, especially since each made big athletic records for Yale.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS TO MEET TODAY

The first meeting of the newly elected governors of the College Union Board will be held at 4:30 this afternoon in the Graduate Council room. The three upper classes met Friday to elect their representatives.

Pierre Bleeker and Herman Lefkowitz were selected by the Senior class, J. M. Cline and George Weinhold, by the Juniors, and George Brucker and Wesley Getman, by the Sophomores.

Bleeker has been chairman of the committee which began the Union movement, and is the only one of the newly elected men who acted on the committee.

LATIN REMOVED FROM LIST OF REQUIREMENTS AT YALE

Union appears to stand almost pre-eminently alone among the colleges in requiring Greek for the A. B. degree. Almost coincident with the radical changes adopted by the Faculty at Princeton in regard to entrance requirements has come the announcement from the Yale Corporation that it has done away with Latin either for entrance or for a degree at Yale University. This change is much more radical than the one announced by the Faculty at Princeton which has merely dropped Greek from the A.B. degree and Latin from the B.S. degree. Yale has transferred Latin entirely "from the group of required to that of elective subjects for admission." Besides the radical change in the policy of requiring Latin Yale has made a number of other important changes which are the outcome of two months' consideration and work by the corporation committee.

POPULAR ENGLISH SPORT TO BE REVIVED

After a lapse of five years the English Hanley is to be resumed, and the question now arises: Shall an American university crew challenge the British this year?

The authorities at Yale are strongly in favor of the idea. In the opinion of the coach, a meeting between the universities of the two countries would be attractive in stimulating the new idea of international sports and providing the best means of cementing the relationship between Great Britain and the United States for which the war has paved the way. The race as proposed would be rowed on the Thames, preferably Harvard and Yale, Oxford and Cambridge competing.

The distance of the course over which the competing crews would row is one mile, 550 yards, and has been covered by winning crews in less than 7 minutes.

Columbia University was the first American college to send a crew to compete in a Hanley Regatta. It was sent over in 1878 and carried off the Visitors' Challenge Cup.
